Calculating Fish Load in a Hard Show Tank

“Fish Points” is used to evaluate the fish biomass in show tanks. Fish points are used to relate various sizes of fish on a common basis of comparison. Through experience we have determined that a hard show tank should not hold more than 80 points (where a twelve-inch fish is equal to 5 fish points). To help you determine how many tanks you will need at the show to accommodate your fish entries, use the form below to calculate your total fish points.

Note that this table has been placed in our show database and during the Koi show; we will run the program to determine the water quality in your show tanks. For your fish’s safety, if your total fish points are over the maximum, we will ask you to move some fish to an extra tank. You will be charged for the extra tank.
